NMU gives back to special school

REPORTER

UNIVERSAL Accessibility and Disability Services (UADS), at Nelson Mandela University, recently empowered young minds when they gave back to the learners of Northern Lights School in Cotswold.

While handing over their donation of assistive devices to the school, Nosiphiwo Delubom, the head of the UADS, indicated that, as a university, it is part of their vision to give service to society.

Delubom said the collaborations they have with special schools are an effort to create access to education for learners with disabilities in schools and in institutions of higher learning.

"Working together will create more access for these learners as every learner has a right to education," Delubom said.

Local daycare treated to goodie bags

The IIE's Varsity College PE's staff, students and VC Cares (student volunteer body) recently held a marshmallow and chocolate egg drive on campus to gift the learners of On the Sparrow Daycare with a sweet treat goodie bag. Community engagement is crucial in allowing The IIE's Varsity College to provide its students with the opportunity to develop holistically. From left are Zoe Barnard (third year IIE Bachelor of Commerce in Law The IIE's Varsity College PE), and Nokuthu Tsotsobe (founder of On the Sparrow Daycare), at the handover of the sweet treat packs at On the Sparrow Daycare.
